

Popular events like the football World Cup and other international sporting occasions are essential in easing international tensions and releasing patriotic emotions in a safe way.

To what extent do you agree or disagree with this opinion?

Popular events aren't really essential in easing international tensions or in some cases the cause of releasing patriotic emotions in a safe way. I understand popular events just ~~motive-motivate~~ some people to ease tensions or to release some emotions in a safe way. Basically, it's ~~a the~~ matter of motivation motivating not essentiality (necessity). In my words, the concept of motivation can be substituted for the concept of essentiality. It simply means that we can give some people a piece of cake to ease tensions or to release their emotions in a safe way.

As I remember there was a plan in my school ~~where that~~ teachers could give elementary students candy as a reward. It was said candy is motivation for students. I think that was a a good plan and it really worked because, first of all, students love candy. So they did their best and worked extra hard to get candy. Secondly, it was about the reward. There is always willingness to reward. Hence, candy as a prize/rewarding ~~were-~~motivated ~~strongly~~ students. strongly strongly stronglystrongly

To summarize, there are some people that are motivated by a candy at any age. A candy motivates them to release their emotions in a safe way not a dangerous way.
